WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A weak weather system will pass over the Pacific Northwest today and may bring some light rain to Northwest California late this afternoon and tonight. A ridge aloft will rebuild Monday for a return of dry weather which will last through midweek. Late in the week there is a better chance for rain.

Medford Weather:

Precipitation ahead of a cold front moves into the coastal waters this morning and showers will taper off behind the front tonight as the jet axis exits stage right. Snow levels drop to a little above the Cascade Pass levels with a meager addition to the snow pack by Monday morning. Showers will continue to slowly taper off during the day Monday. By Tuesday morning, weak offshore flow develops across the region with fog deepening in the west side valleys in the mornings again through Wednesday.

Reno Weather:

Low pressure near the West Coast will lead to a few light showers today. A cold front will move across Northern Nevada tonight and tomorrow with the best chance for rain and snow showers north of Truckee to Fallon Line.

San Francisco Weather:

A weak weather system may produce isolated light showers across far southern Monterey County this morning. Otherwise, partly cloudy and dry weather is forecast today. High pressure will gradually build over California from late today through Tuesday and maintain a dry weather pattern through at least the middle of the week. Rain could potentially develop across the North Bay as early as Thursday night. Rain chances will increase and become more widespread by next weekend.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A couple of weak weather systems may bring a few light showers mainly over the mountains today and Monday. Fair weather is expected Tuesday through Thursday with more widespread precipitation possible on Friday into the weekend.

Hanford Weather:

A storm system will continue to impact Southern California bringing rain showers as far north as Tulare County. Additionally, snow showers will be possible over the Sierra Crest generally above 7500 feet. These showers will continue into the early afternoon hours. Otherwise, dry and mild weather will take hold of the region on Monday and continue through the work week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A slow moving low pressure system will bring periods of rain through this morning with showers becoming less widespread during the afternoon. Dry weather is expected by Monday as low pressure moves east. Mostly clear skies and warmer weather will follow for the remainder of the week as surface high pressure builds into the Great Basin and offshore flow develops.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A weak low pressure system will move inland through Southern California bringing periods of showers with light to locally moderate rainfall amounts today, and then decreasing this evening. Dry conditions forecast on Monday. For Tuesday through Thursday, high pressure aloft near the West Coast and surface high pressure over the Great Basin will bring a warming trend with periods of gusty northeast winds, the strongest on Wednesday. Onshore flow will return late in the week with slow cooling and a return of night and morning coastal low clouds and fog.

Southeast California Weather:

Unsettled weather will continue through the early part of this week as a series of fast moving troughs continue to move through the Desert Southwest. Showers will once again be possible late tonight into Monday morning, followed by a slight chance again early Tuesday. High pressure will return to the area by midweek with dry weather and slowly increasing temperatures expected from Wednesday into next weekend.
